

Vasey Commercial Heating & Air Conditioning, Inc., Provides Non-Profit Upgraded Air Conditioning

It's going to be more comfortable and safe for Indianapolis-based Outside the Box to provide services to individuals with intellectual disabilities, thanks to a generous donation from Vasey Commercial Heating & Air Conditioning.

In June, Vasey Commercial Heating & Air Conditioning purchased and installed 22 energy-efficient air conditioning units at the headquarters of Outside the Box, which aims to provide day, employment and art services to individuals with developmental disabilities.

"Their building had very antiquated equipment, and we felt this was a really good fit to give us something to do to give back," said Dave Sheffield, a Principal at Vasey Commercial Heating & Air Conditioning, a Linc Service contractor since 1997.

Since moving into their current building in 2011, Outside the Box has nearly tripled in size. It put a strain on the building's aging HVAC system, said Allison Shaw, an Outside the Box Staff Support Specialist.

"A donation like this really allows us to put our funds back into programming," Shaw said. "In addition to the tremendous cost savings, these new systems are really going to make sure that we can ensure participants' physical health needs are being met. It's really going to make us all more comfortable and safe."

Sheffield said he is proud to see his company making a difference in the community.

"When we asked for volunteers to perform the installation, we had a fantastic response, and that really says a lot about our employees," Sheffield said. "It's important for Vasey to get involved in the community, and this was a nice opportunity for us, as a corporation, to step up and provide a service."
